Readers also browse a growing library of dub facts and the swipe discovery deck, where fans find their next dubbed series one card at a time. THE AUDIENCE

- Dub first intent. Every visit answers one question: when does the dub drop, and where do I watch it? Your brand reaches fans at the moment they choose what to watch next.
- Planned watching. DubMorrow readers plan their viewing around dub release dates, so the calendar is a daily habit, checked the way a schedule gets checked.
- Habitual and direct. Most traffic arrives direct, from bookmarks and repeat checkers who return for every new episode drop.
- English through and through. During Nov 4 to 12, 2026, 95.78 percent of readers used the site in English, so a dub focused campaign speaks to exactly the audience it was made for.

WHERE A PARTNER APPEARS

DubMorrow is not ad forward, and that is deliberate. Placements stay peripheral, they never cover content, and they stay relevant to the audience. Readers trust the calendar, and the brands on it benefit from that trust.

- Calendar Leaderboard: top of the calendar home page (728×90 desktop, 320×100 mobile)
- Show Page Rectangle: 300×250 beside the cast, dates, and watch links
- Sponsored Dub of the Week: a clearly labeled featured slot tied to a premiere week
- Swipe Deck Card: inside the discovery deck, where fans browse by taste
- Facts pages: presence across the dub facts library readers share
- Social posts: sponsored posts on Facebook, Instagram, X, Tumblr, and YouTube, where DubMorrow posts daily, timed to a release
